

Doelger was friend as well as builder

song about "ticky-tacky" houses called "Little Boxes."

Doelger's supporters defend him by pointing out that Westlake was named one of the 15 best communities in the nation in terms of living quality by Ladies Home Journal several years ago.

"I think Westlake has vindicated itself. You can't judge a development built years ago by today's standards," his son said.

Doelger was, by all accounts, economy-minded. In fact, some remember him as a downright penny-pincher who had endless energy when bargaining contracts and refused to ante up when political candidates came calling.

Frank Blum, Sr., a former Daly City councilman, city attorney and judge, recalls how Doelger stocked up on canned goods when they were on sale and sometimes took a friend to his favorite doughnut shop for lunch rather than a fancy restaurant.

Blum said, "His biggest asset was that he could charm people. He wanted to be liked, to be thought of as a friend. At the same time, he was not a perfect man. He did not want anybody to become a millionaire off him.

Doelger was incensed when he discovered that an employee had ordered more than $100,000 worth of parts that wouldn't fit any of the tractors his company owned.

He fired the man — just as he fired his advertising manager, Ralph E. Lawrence, in 1953. Lawrence had committed an even bigger sin: he was soon to be one to 10 years in San Quentin for embezzling $30,000 from Doelger by writing phony invoices.

Loyal employees saw a different side of Doelger: a man who sometimes tucked a little extra money into the pay envelope of an employee with a sick child and scheduled new developments just to provide steady work for as many workers as possible.

Jack Kendree, who managed Doelger's shopping centers in Daly City and Pacifica for 21 years, said, "In my many years of business, I have never known a man more thoughtful of his employees."

From 1964 to 1969 Doelger was America's biggest homebuilder. With more than 500 workmen on his payroll, he was building and selling an average of two homes per day. He used 17.5 million boardfeet of lumber and 100,000 sacks of Portland cement in one year.

Doelger seemed to have been born with the work ethic. His first business venture at the age of 20 consisted of selling sash weights that he had picked up after the San Francisco fire. He made $300.

In 1919 he opened a hot dog stand in San Francisco. He soon tired of that and jumped at the chance to join his brother Frank in the real estate business in 1922. One year later, he started his own business, which he called Henry Doelger Builder.

Before Westlake, he built thousands of homes in the Sunset and Parkside sections of San Francisco and defense housing in Oakland and South San Francisco.

An advertisement in the April 20, 1940 edition of the San Francisco News praised such Doelger "firsts" as "the patio entrance, the streamline bath and the club car breakfast nook."

Doelger homes were selling around that time for as little as $4,350 — $450 down and $27.75 per month.

After he built Westlake, including the 2,000 Westlake Apartments and the Westlake and Skyline shopping centers, Doelger built thousands more homes and the Fairmont and Linda Mar shopping centers in Pacifica.

Through the years he never tired of visiting construction sites and chatting with the people who were building and buying his homes. It was that familiarity that gave him what some people called a "sixth sense" for buying and selling at the right time.

Just as he had built homes for the returning veterans of World War II, he planned to build homes for the soldiers returning from Vietnam.

But on the eve of building a $500 million much-touted development along the coast between Montara and Half Moon Bay in 1969, complete with three shopping centers, a wharf and two golf courses, Doelger was out inspecting the site when he met a couple of women who told him they didn't want any more children attending Cabrillo School.

A few weeks later, Doelger sold 8,000 acres of his prime coastal real estate to Deane and Deane Co., a subsidiary of Westinghouse Corp. for $13,844,000.

Doelger had accurately sensed an anti-development mood that has made it impossible for Westinghouse to build more than a few hundred houses since it bought the land.

In 1965 he sold the Westlake Shopping Center for $9.5 million. In 1972 he sold the Westlake Apartments for $33 million.

In his later years, he dabbled in only a few minor building projects and spent a great deal of time cruising on his yachts, often anchoring in Monaco.

Nineteen Daly City residents had the retired Henry Doelger in mind when they urged the City Council in a letter last March not to name any portion of the city after him.

They wrote, "As far as we can see it, Mr. Doelger developed the western part of Daly City for one purpose: to make money, a lot of it, which enabled him, among other things, to live on his yacht on the Mediterranean Sea. Hardly a reason to name a street, a park or whatever after him."

Recalling the backlash against Doelger, Haskins said, "People have short memories. They think the forest grew by itself."

"People are probably jealous of his wealth," said Gertrude Kendree, Jack Kendree's wife.

The Henry Doelger they remember is the man who donated unselfishly to Mary's Help Hospital, the Boy Scouts and churches of several denominations; who gave Pacifica a playground at Fairmont Shopping Center and Daly City a clubhouse in Westlake Park, and who left millions to philanthropic causes and 42 former employees, including $30,000 to a gardener and $40,000 to a maid.

In an age when the word "developer" is often linked in people's minds with the word "greedy," Henry Doelger doesn't stand much of a chance of being immortalized with many public displays of appreciation.

Perhaps the most lasting tribute to Doelger is the fact that people living in his houses still believe in the dream he brought to Westlake: a dream of growing old surrounded by laughing children and romping pets in a house that is truly a home.

Veteran planner resigns

A veteran Daly City planner, Fred DeJarlais, resigned Monday to take a job with a civil engineering firm in San Francisco.

DeJarlais, 36, explained that he plans to quit his job as Housing and Community Development Act coordinator for Daly City July 27 in order to return to the field in which he started engineering.

He is scheduled to begin his new job with Varnell and Associates of San Francisco Aug. 1.

DeJarlais began working for Daly City in December 1966 as an engineering draftsman. From December 1971 through April 1973, he worked as a staff planner for the city's Redevelopment Agency.

After a two-year sojourn in Europe, he returned to the Redevelopment Agency

The Cow Palace in Daly City was filled during a Jehovah's Witnesses convention last weekend (July 12-15) and another capacity crowd of 14,000 is expected there for a second convention scheduled in 1975. He was promoted to his present job in July 1976.

Daly City City Manager David Brown said, "It will be very difficult to replace Fred. His experience in planning and federal programs cannot be duplicated. I am very sorry he is leaving. The city recently got word that the Department of Housing and Urban Development had accepted its 1979-80 application for $830,000 in HUD funds for community development programs, including $304,850 for housing rehabilitation.

DeJarlais said, "If there's a good time to leave, this is probably

Gun goes off, hits officer in finger

Officer Neil Hammermann is taking a few days off this week after a malfunctioning automatic pistol discharged itself, hitting him in the left index finger at the Daly City Police Department pistol range at about 2:30 p.m. last Thursday.

Li Phil LaBrazzo said, Hammermann, the department's weapons officer and bomb disposal expert, was test-firing some weapons on the range, in the basement of the Civic Center, when the automatic pistol jammed. It somehow fired itself as Hammermann tried to clear it. LaBrazzo

Civic Ballet

Diane Roberts, director of the Daly City Civic Ballet, is spending the summer making preparations for the company's annual major production.

According to Mrs. Marie Brizuela, the president of the company of directors, this year the company will present "The Nutcracker" in December.

Latest addition to the ballet's board of directors is Mrs. Victor Kyriakis, who has assumed the post of membership chairman.

Home from a junket to the Midwest to visit family and friends are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Jordan of Garden Village.

The Jordans and children, Roger and Christine, drove and camped on their trip.

Mrs. Doris Johnson, tour chairman for the AARP chapter in Daly City, is reminding people of the August visit to the Japanese Tea Garden in San Francisco on Aug. 20 is the day selected for this trip. Call now and reserve space, as the plan calls for car pools to and from The City.

Also scheduled for August is the Fifty Plus Club trip to Lake Tahoe's North Shore and visits to the casinos in that area.

Mrs. Elizabeth Funderburg can supply more information or take your request for reservations.

Mrs. Louise Enberg, director of the area chapter of Friends Outside, reports that the group was able to send more than 120 children to camp this summer as a result of fund-raising efforts and public contributions.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Morford of the Franciscan Park section of Daly City have had the third romantic announcement in their family in a span of less than one month.

Father's Day weekend the Morfords received news that their two oldest grandsons, Scot Heath and Mark Perry, would be married before the fall and this past weekend a visit from their oldest granddaughter, Deborah Perry, gave them news of a third wedding in the offing.

Debbie will wed Donald Ortega in a church wedding planned for September 1980 in the San Jose area.

Day camp this year is scheduled from Mondays through Thursdays, August 6 through August 17 at Camp Ida Smith on Lake Merced Boulevard, with registration presently open to all girls. Scouts and non-Scouts.

More information is available from Day Camp Director Diane Pangburn, 992-9218.

Dog poisoner at work here, PHS warns

Two recent incidents of harm to dogs have prompted the Peninsula Humane Society to issue warnings to pet owners throughout the county. Along with other humane organizations, the humane society is offering a $1,000 reward for information leading for the arrest and conviction of a dog poisoner whom it believes is responsible for four dog killings since last November.

The most recent incident occurred July 5, when a 12-year-old golden retriever was seen ingesting hamburger meat that apparently had been tossed by its owner's backyard in the 800 block of Vera Street, Redwood City.

Although the dog's owner rushed the pet to a veterinarian, the dog died a few hours later of what was diagnosed as strychnine poisoning.

Tony Campagna, an animal control officer for the humane society, said five dogs in Redwood City fell victim to a poisoner in November and December of last year and three of those animals died as a result of eating hamburger laced with strychnine.

He urged pet owners in the vicinity to check their yards before allowing their animals outside. Strychnine poisoning almost always causes death unless treated immediately.

A 15-year-old suspect was hooked into Hillcrest Juvenile Home in San Mateo in connection with a shooting of a poodle in Broadmoor on June 29.

It's the same method and the same area. Unfortunately, we have no suspects and no leads," he said.

The 3-year-old dog, owned by the Ferraro family on "D" St., was shot in the back of the head by a 22-caliber pellet from an air rifle by a youngster who reportedly had been shooting at birds.

Officer Daryl Jones of the Broadmoor Police Department and Sgt. Dave Tullios of the humane society discussed the air rifle near the home of the suspect and took the youngster into custody.

The names of juvenile suspects are not released.

The bullet was lodged in the dog's skull, near its spinal cord, but Campagna reported Tuesday that the animal was in stable condition and had a good chance for recovery.

The Humane Society is located at 12 Airport Boulevard, San Mateo.

Puzzling 'push-ups' by a cat

By DR. BARNETT, D.V.M.
QUESTION: Have you any idea why cats will stand in one position and do what might be called "push-ups"? They often use a person's body for this action, frequently keeping their eyes closed in a dreamy sort of way. When I was a boy I remember my mother calling it "mixing bread." Also, do you have any suggestions as to how a person can influence a dog to like a cat? I have been feeding a stray Manx tom cat. He wants to come into the house and be part of the family, but my Doxie female objects strongly. I think she really likes him, but refuses to let it become part of the family.

of humans, and I'm sure you could treat them too. However, we were wondering the other night what a veterinarian would do if someone phoned and needed help with a nine-foot alligator. Maybe the alligator was dying and you had to bring him around. What would happen?

ANSWER: What you describe is "kneading," and often is done by cats when they are happy and contented. Kittens frequently do it when they are nursing and with adult cats it probably is a carryover from the feeling of contentment while nursing.

ANSWER: When I started practice many years ago this sort of problem was not at all unusual. We treated all types of animals and, under the circumstances, I think we did a creditable job. Now we have specialists in exotic animals and simply would refer the alligator to a specialist. We are trained in veterinary school to have basic knowledge of all animals. We then choose our area of interest and became more knowledgeable in that area when we started practicing. Some individuals in farming areas continue to treat all the various farm animals plus pets, but in California most veterinarians limit themselves to one or two species.

In my experience, cats and dogs usually will work out their differences if left alone. In most cases the cat ultimately will become dominant. Of course, they usually dominate the humans in the household, also. Your dachshund probably is jealous, which is understandable, but try to give her more attention and ignore the cat for a while.

QUESTION: It is my guess that a veterinarian has to be "all-around." You probably have to treat any kind of living thing outside

THE DIET CORNER

By ELISE GENDAR

Great expectations, or reasonable expectations and diet success are interrelated.

You have to know what to expect from your weight loss.

Are you hoping that your social life will swing in a 360-degree arc, that you'll become the belle of the ball, and you'll drive men wild?

Chances are if you have a flashing personality and a ready wit, you may. However, if you've been quiet, reserved, and one of the crowd, the chances are you'll remain that way. Diets won't change the basic you. They'll simply give you the opportunity to showcase yourself attractively.

Losing weight is a big change. If you're capable of such a big change, you are capable of other changes as well. As with dieting, you must work at these changes. If you've hidden your overweight by staying home watching television, and not making friends, being thin won't open the door, turn off the set, and turn on the people. You'll have to do that all by yourself.

You can do it in a number of ways. You can sign up for a dance course, join a swimming club, take tennis lessons, or volunteer at a hospital. Wherever you go, be bright and friendly. Talk to people. Start the conversation. Out in a new crowd, no one knows you for your old image. Before you know it, the door will be open, the television set gathering cobwebs, and you'll have new acquaintances to polish into friends.

Passion Punch
1/2 cup diet raspberry flavoring
1/2 cup diet grape flavoring
1 cup water
1 bottle diet shape-up soda
1 bottle diet ginger soda
Fresh strawberries
Freeze 12 whole strawberries in ice ring to float in punch bowl. Mix all other ingredients together in punch bowl. Before serving, place ice ring in punch.

Your great diet expectation is to be thin. Whatever else becomes part of your future is what you add by your own determination and choice.

Koharu presents Kansai cooking

Authentic original Japanese cooking in the "Kansai" style found mostly in Osaka and Kyoto, Japan, is now brought to the Peninsula by Owners ROSE and TED OSAKI at their beautiful new KOHARU Japanese restaurant in downtown San Mateo. Chef Hideshi Imanaka comes directly from a distinguished career of cooking for some of the finest establishments in Japan. Serving both lunch and dinner. Half the fun of dining at PHIL LEHR'S Pay-Buy-Once STEAKERY, on the lower level of the S.F. Hilton Tower, is recognizing all of the famous people having dinner there. Among famous faces the other evening, separate tables were for pop music great Dizzy Gillespie and former Dodgers pitcher ace Claude Osteen. Important announcement: Personable ALFREDO and MANUEL ROJAS, owners/chefs at ALFREDO'S restaurant in the heart of downtown San Mateo, will present live entertainment in the fourth-floor lounge on Thurs., Fri. and Sat. evenings. Also new hours here. Dinner specials for only $3.95 are still being served seven days a week from 5 to 11 p.m. LOUIS FRIUTSCH and his staff provide a warm, personal and hospitality at the chic L'ALBERGE French restaurant in Atherton Redwood City. Fruttschi's staff is trained to provide expert service plus the extra incentives that make dining here an elegant experience.

Romano's special is original recipe

Chicken Livers Saute with fresh mushrooms is a big favorite with many diners at ROMANO'S Italian restaurant in Rockaway Beach, Pacific. Thanks to the original recipe Owner ENRICO ROMANO obtained from his dear Italian mother, ENRICKETTA, who personally supervises the kitchen, this house specialty is truly outstanding. "Evita" is the newest drink sensation at ROSEBUD'S ENGLISH PUB, on San Francisco's Geary Street. "Theater Row" it was called by Managing Partner BILL MONRO in honor of the hit musical. "Evita" opening Tuesday at the Orpheum Theater. JIM SNADECKI'S SCOTTY CAMPBELL'S, which has been a Redwood City landmark on El Camino Real for more than 25 years, has developed a loyal clientele by maintaining a policy of serving top quality food at reasonable prices and giving excellent service. Acapulco Gold, a blend of rum, mango juice and Creme de Banana, and Guadalupe, a southern surprise, are among the unusual cocktails served at LA PINATA Mexican restaurant in Burlingame. JERRY LYERLA, owner of JOHN'S PLACE, the self-styled "working man's bar" in downtown Burlingame, is always thinking up special happenings for his customers. A new dimension in deli service and selection has been introduced to the Peninsula by DEMETRI'S DELI & CATERING in downtown San Mateo.

Gong's saves time, money and effort

One of the marvels of the modern technological age is how the telephone can instantly transform downtime into a feast of gourmet Chinese food and save you time, money and effort all at the same time. That is, by calling GONG'S Chinese restaurant in South San Francisco and letting general owner/chef JOHN CHIANG prepare the complete works for you to pick up or to have delivered. Opening to the public for lunch (formerly serving only private parties) has met with enthusiastic response at LA BELLA PASTA, the popular Italian restaurant on the boardwalk overlooking the lagoon at Edgewater Place Shopping Center. Foster City. Owner SALVATORE PAVA is also offering a "dinner special" of $1 off with the ad from today's Bright Lights. August 5th when you present the ad appearing in today's Bright Lights section. A first-class "disco" with all the features, top-flight deejays, one of the largest lighted dancefloors on the West Coast, over 50 speakers to "feel" the music, fog and bubble machine, is to be found right here in Burlingame at QUESTION DISCO, with minors welcome. It's easy to see why things are lively from 8 p.m. to 2 a.m. every night. A special this week is $1 off with the ad from today's Bright Lights. Also, new weekly dance contest every Sunday, with a $25 prize. You'll be glad to know that, although ordinarily closed on Sundays, BAYHILL LOUNGE in San Bruno will accommodate special parties and groups on Sundays. Check with Mike (873-4477) for information and advance arrangements.

Royal Pagoda offers opening discount

Grand opening of the ROYAL PAGODA, a bright, new Chinese restaurant in Redwood City, has drawn many patrons to the corner of Brewster and El Camino (across from the Greyhound Bus Depot) to enjoy Cantonese and Mandarin menu selections. As a "grand opening special" Owners SARLINA and JONATHAN WONG are offering 10 percent discount on lunch or dinner through July 31. American diners are also available. Lunch is buffet style Mondays through Fridays. Diners are served seven days a week. It's back to a usual bustling business at VINCE'S Italian and Seafood restaurant. Vacation was more than just breaking away from routine for the LICATAS. The complete interior was painted and polished, and there's new carpeting throughout. Drop by — the chefs haven't lost their culinary touch. Many of the details that go into selection, preparation and serving of the fine French food at LA POTINIERE French restaurant in Mateo Square take place behind the scenes. Owner ROGER NICOLAS personally sees to every detail. In answer to popular demand, TILLIE SCHOLTZ agreed to serve her famed home made Potato-Leek Soup, the old-country Potato Pancakes at TILLIE'S 'LIL' FRANKFURT German and Continental Restaurant, Moss Beach, at least once a week (Mondays). A tradition of three generations of serving the public outstanding food on the Coastside is carried on by NICK and LORRAINE GUST and son CHUCK NICK'S (steaks and seafood), THE MOONRAKER (continental cuisine), and CAPTAIN CHARLES (gourmet seafood), plus the SEA BREEZE MOTEL, for visiting guests. One of the Bay Area's most delightful dining traditions is Sunday Ramos Fizz Brunch among the flowers and fountains at LEHR'S GREENHOUSE garden restaurant in San Francisco. It's served from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. and your choice is a Ramos Fizz, Bloody Mary or glass of wine is included in the modest price.

Good morning, good cooks.
Every once in a while a recipe appears that sparks spirited discussion. Should it be classified as a salad or as a dessert?
Frozen Fruit Medley is one such recipe and whether you opt for salad or for dessert, the end result is utterly delicious. Non-dairy whipped topping blends beautifully with strawberry flavor gelatin, mayonnaise and fresh and canned fruit. Garnished with fresh sliced strawberries and additional whipped topping, here is a light refreshing dessert for a warm summer evening. Conversely, it is just as refreshingly served as a salad for lunch. Surrounded by crisp green lettuce and accompanied by additional mayonnaise or sour cream, it just hits the spot.
In addition to its versatility, this recipe is a boon to extra-busy homemakers who operate on a very tight summer schedule. It can be made the night before, popped into the freezer and ready to slice and enjoy the next day.

FROZEN FRUIT MEDLEY
1 can (8 oz.) chunk pineapple in juice
1 package (3 oz.) strawberry flavor gelatin
Dash of salt
1 cup boiling water
1/4 cup lemon juice
1 container (4 1/2 oz.) frozen whipped topping, thawed
1/3 cup mayonnaise
1 medium banana, diced
1/2 cup seeded halved red or green grapes
1/4 cup dried maraschino cherries
1/4 cup chopped nuts.
Drain the eight ounces pineapple, reserving juice. Add water to the juice to make 1/2 cup liquid. Dissolve the three ounces gelatin and dash of salt in one cup boiling water. Add the measured liquid and one fourth cup lemon juice. Stir well and chill until thickened.
Blend the whipped topping with the third cup mayonnaise, one banana, one half cup seeded grapes and fourth cup each maraschino cherries and nuts; fold into gelatin. Pour into an 8x4- or 9x5-inch loaf pan.
Freeze until firm, about four hours or overnight. Unmold, cut in slices and serve as dessert or salad. Garnish with additional fruit and whipped cream if desired.
Make the time cups for 4 to 6 servings.

Don't yell about all the Giants' trades

Stu Smith, the Giants' director of public affairs, raised a good point the other night on Ken Dito's radio sports talk show. As Stu was being bombarded with barbs from fans in the form of a litany of past bad Giants' trades.

"I'm getting a little tired," said Smith, "of hearing this organization criticized for trades made before any of the present front office was in power. The famous one I always hear about, the George Foster trade, was made by another organization years ago. If fans want to criticize us for trades, fine, that's their privilege. But to be fair, they should criticize us for trades we made. Sure, yell at us for trading Madlock if you want, but please, not George Foster."

Le Pacini

Smith is absolutely right. If he wasn't, then it would be appropriate to blame the current Boston Red Sox organization for trading Babe Ruth to the Yankees.

And now that the Foster trade has been brought up, I never have considered it a bad trade.

How could a 22-year-old Foster have broken into an outfield of Ken Henderson, Willie Mays and Bobby Bonds? Ken Henderson, you ask? The current benchmark? Don't forget, Henderson was the man slated eventually to replace Mays in center field. Only 24, he was at the time a much better outfielder and baserunner than Foster, and had just come off a season (his best ever, as it was to turn out) in which he hit .294 with 17 home runs and 88 RBI.

Know who was second string in the outfield that year? Dave Kingman, and a great young prospect named Bernie Williams. Not to mention rookie Jimmy Ray Hart, who played outfield as well as third base, where he eventually ended up in the Giants' scheme of things, and who you now who was being kept down on the farm? Only Gary Matthews and Garry Maddox.

Remember, Foster was no immediate sensation with the Reds. He took more than three seasons to develop with them, including a stint of minor league ball. He was almost 27 before he had any kind of a productive season. Normally, nowadays, no club waits that long for a player to develop. The only edge Cincinnati had over the Giants in smarts was that they were consistent pennant winners, so they could afford to dangle with a guy like Foster. So the Reds weren't good, in Foster's case, they were lucky.

Meanwhile, the Giants won a divisional title the year they traded Foster, in 1971, and Frank Duffy, the fabled good-field, no-hit shortstop for whom the Giants traded Foster, proved to be a valuable addition to a team in need of infield help.

Actually, it wasn't a trade. It was a sale to Minnesota in late 1976 of pinch-hitter Glenn Adams. Adams, originally a Houston farmhand, had an outstanding minor league hitting record, came to the Giants in 1975 and hit .300 for them coming off the bench. The next year he hit .243 and they sold him to the Twins. I was very upset at the time because I felt that Adams, one of those sweet-swinging guys, was one of the better "pure" hitters I had seen in a long time. He was also, admittedly, made for the American League's designated hitter rule, because he wasn't exactly a sweet fielder or a sweet thrower or a sweet runner.

Adams hit .338 for the Twins in '77 as a DH, fell to .258 last year, but is back to his .330-.340 swinging again this year, and carrying a big-league lifetime batting average of close to .300.

Wouldn't Glenn Adams look sweet coming off the bench for the Giants? And he probably wouldn't have cost Spec much money, either.

Back to one of the Giants rarely publicized but good moves, or don't you remember the who's on first controversy when Bill White, Orlando Cepeda and Willie McCovey all were around at the same time?

White, a fine all-around player, had come with the Giants from New York. He had had a promising rookie season as the regular first baseman in 1956 and then went into the service. He was back in '58, but beaten out by the sensational rookie, Orlando Cepeda. The Giants knew they had the unknown McCovey down on the farm about ready to break in (he was), and so in March of '59 they traded White to St. Louis for third baseman Ray Jablonski and pitchers Don Choute and Sam Jones.

Cepeda had become the darling of Giants fans, so few remembered White's not having beaten Orlando out of first base, but many fans were upset at Willie's departure for an aging third baseman and one aging and one unknown pitcher, because they felt that the swift White could play the outfield for the Giants (ironically, if it weren't for the presence of Willie Mays in center, White probably would have played there. Poor Bill kept running into great players!).

Well, White went on to become a big star with the Cardinals, but Cepeda was even bigger with the Giants and Jones almost pitched the Giants to a pennant in '59 (they ended up in third place, only four games behind the Dodgers, two behind the Braves), leading the league in wins (21) and ERA (2.85).

Meanwhile, McCovey had broken in, and all kinds of things were tried to get both Cepeda's and McCovey's bats in the lineup at the same time (sound familiar?), including Cepeda stints at third base and in the outfield. But Orlando sulked and didn't want to switch positions, even though he was more physically suited than McCovey to do so.

McCovey, over the team man, converted to the outfield without complaint, though the move undoubtedly impeded his progress.

Finally, the time came to choose between the two. Actually, it shouldn't have been that tough a choice, because McCovey was younger than Cepeda and Orlando had chronic water on the knee. So in 1966, the Giants chose McCovey and shipped Cepeda to St. Louis (they seemed bound to supply the Cards with All-Star first basemen) for southpaw pitcher Ray Sadecki, who had won 20 games two years before. Nevertheless, I thought it was a terrible trade, as did most other fans. And indeed it turned out to be, as Cepeda went on to lead the Cards to a couple of pennants and become an MVP while Sadecki was winning 32, losing 39 for the Giants over the next four years.

But the move did make way for McCovey, who still is productive, many years after Cepeda's retirement, and who is inexorably bound for the Hall of Fame.

Some historical stats: Only half as many pitchers complete games now as did half a century ago.

Team batting averages have gone up 20 points in the past decade.

If you don't think the A's are in deep, deep, trouble, remember that last year they had by far the worst attendance in the major leagues. No place to go but up, right? Wrong, peanut butter. This year the A's show the biggest deficit in the big leagues in attendance compared with 1978.

DiMaggio baseball

DC nine wins with a dramatic late rally

As if taking sole possession of first place wasn't glorious enough in itself, the Flying Goose Joe DiMaggio baseball team of Daly City did so in dramatic fashion Sunday.

After defeating visiting Millbrae 6-4 in the first game of Sunday's DiMaggio baseball doubleheader at Marchbanks Field, Flying Goose was trailing 4-2 in the nightcap. With two outs and the bases empty in the bottom of the seventh inning, Flying Goose was apparently destined to get only a split 8 especially when the count went to two strikes on John Greulich.

Storybook time. After working the count to 2-2, Greulich smacked a single to deep right-center field. Then catcher Greg Eggleton chopped a hopper off the third base bag for another baserun.

Suddenly, that brought the potential tying run to the plate in the person of Roger Homer. And Homer, hitting third (and catcher Eggleton had done), realized that potential — to the fullest. Homer cracked a 310-foot, three-run home run to deep left field, giving Flying Goose a 5-4 victory.

In other Peninsula Joe DiMaggio Baseball league twin bills Sunday, John's Deli of San Mateo split at Fitzgerald Field while visiting Lou's of Pacifica and San Bruno were splitting at San Bruno Park.

Southpaw Dave Paulus cracked a three-run homer and had four RBI's for Millbrae in the first game, but it wasn't enough to prevent Flying Goose from capturing its second of three straight wins over Millbrae in five days.

With the score deadlocked at 2-2 in the nightcap, Millbrae took a short-lived 4-2 lead in the top of the winner's got a strong relief effort from Rich Fissalacqua.

FC and Flying Goose take PAL victories

Mike Shields and Joe Nobles sparked their teams to lopsided victories in Peninsula Cal-PAL Baseball League action Sunday.

With Shields smacking three hits and driving in a pair of runs, host Foster City beat Menlo Park 15-4 Sunday at Sonoma Field. With Nobles cracking four hits and accounting for six RBI's, visiting Flying Goose of Daly City buried Millbrae 16-8 at Mills Hill.

Schields was one of five Foster City players who drove in two runs each. Blumenthal unloaded a two-run homer with one out, abetted in the bottom of the second inning, wiping out a short-lived 10 Menlo Park edge and putting Foster City ahead to stay.

Right-hander John Saylor of Hillsdale went five and two-thirds strong innings on the mound for Foster City, striking out seven Menlo Park hitters while walking three. Foster City, which had dropped a 5-2 non-league decision to Flying Goose in the championship game of the Fremont Invitational Colt Baseball Tournament Saturday, now stands at 2-4 overall this season.

By winning, Foster City and Flying Goose — which meet next Sunday — kept pace with each other. Foster City and Flying Goose are currently tied for first place in the league's Southern Division with 10-2 records. Millbrae is now 9-3 and still alone atop the Northern Division.

American Legion San Bruno spoils San Mateo title bid

Foster City Post 666 did first-place San Mateo Post 82 a favor Sunday by knocking South San Francisco City 12-1 in American title contention, but San Mateo failed to clinch the championship, losing a 2-1 decision to host San Bruno at Capuchino High.

While San Bruno was pulling to within one game of San Mateo, Foster City rallied to stun visiting San Francisco City 12-1 in Sunday's Pacific City topped visiting Pacifica 6-3 at Sequoia High in Sunday's other Peninsula American Legion Baseball League action.

San Mateo Post 82, now 11-3 in American Legion play and 24-14 overall, can clinch the league championship by beating last-place Pacifica Saturday. However, a San Mateo loss Saturday, coupled with a San Bruno victory over South City Friday evening, would leave San Mateo and San Bruno locked in a first-place tie at 11-4.

San Bruno scored both of its runs in the bottom of the fourth inning, snapping a scoreless tie. Andy Pudlo drew a walk, Jim Stack singled him to second and catcher Mike Wild drilled a double over the head of San Mateo's center-fielder, plating both Pudlo and Stack. Wild was thrown out on the play when he tried to stretch his hit into a triple — but the damage had already been done.

San Mateo's Mike Mahoney — who had smacked two hits as San Bruno beat visiting Redwood City 8-4 Saturday at Fitzgerald Field — kept his incredible hitting (now at 37 games) intact Sunday by smacking a single up the middle in the top of the third.

Foster City trailed 10-3 halfway through the fourth inning and seemed destined for its 11th loss in 14 decisions. But Dave Berman and Joe Spielman eventually cracked three hits apiece for Foster City, relieving its role as spoiler.

Trailing 11-9, Foster City capped a valiant comeback by pushing across three runs in the bottom of the eighth, something the hosts had already done in the last of the seventh.

Perry Chigas started Foster City's winning rally with a single. After a strikeout and a foulout, Spielman belted a double, with Chigas holding at third. John Rigg then reached first when South City's shortstop couldn't handle his ground ball; that loaded the bases as Chigas (somewhat surprisingly) did not

Prince two strokes back in Publix golf

PORTLAND, Ore. — Apparently all of the work South San Francisco's Dean Prince put into the medal play aspect of his golf game is beginning to pay off.

Prince, better known as a match-play golfer, fired an even-par 71 over the 6,600-yard West Delta course Monday in the first day qualifying of the U.S. Public Links golf championships. Prince is the defending champion.

Tied for the lead in the field of 182 golfers at two-under 69 are Dennis Walsh of Grover, Texas and John Sanko of San Francisco, who burned up the back nine with a sizzling four-under-par 32.

Six other golfers are tied at 70, followed by Prince and nine other shotmakers at even-par. Tommy Smith, also a graduate of South City High and now a San Francisco fireman, was one stroke back of Prince at 72. Tom White of Foster City fired a 74.

"That is a good score on this course," Prince told The Times today of his 71.

"The greens are the biggest I've ever seen," continued Prince. "And they are so quick that it's scary. You can end up with a 100-foot putt if you don't have your ball going at the pin."

The Peninsula insurance man also said that the entire game is just about on the greens, i.e. putting.

"It was 102 Monday and it's supposed to be 92 today," said Prince. "Because of the unusual heat up here, the rough hasn't been growing. So you can hit a wayward shot and still get your next shot on the green."

The low 64 golfers in medal play will advance to match play Wednesday, and Prince is confident that he'll make the cut.

"The lowest during the sectional qualifying here was 150, so I think that 151 should get you into the tournament," he added.

Attendees had to sprinkle water on the tees between groups to keep the course playable.

Manwalk anniversary: Cause for Pause

By ARVILLE PINACOM
Significant historical events have a way of uniting people in remembrance, especially if the happening is unprecedented and shocking. Many still remember exactly what they were doing when they heard the news that President John Kennedy was shot that November day in Dallas.

But personal planning to participate in events also can play a strong part in unifying memory. For example, a few years back there was a compelling urge among the historically conscious to be "doing something significant" on the Bicentennial Fourth of July.

Part of this week and next, July 16 through 24, marks the anniversary of another series of planned experiences for many Americans. Not only space enthusiasts centered their activities 10 years ago around the news about Apollo 11. It seemed as if everyone either held or attended "moon landing" parties, eager to share the televised significance of the event with others who also would remember with whom and where they were as well as what they heard and saw.

On that July 20 we were involved in a family gathering in Arlington, Va. Several generations of my husband's cousins had come for dinner and to meet us. But kinship played second fiddle to Apollo that Sunday afternoon and evening. We spent much of the time crowded around the TV set in fascination, first as the lander set down at 4:17 and 43 seconds p.m. Eastern Daylight Time, then as Armstrong and Aldrin made their descents.

to the lunar surface six hours later.

The days that followed the successful return of the astronauts to earth were high for Americans as a people. We had reached a goal set by the late President Kennedy almost as a tribute to our faith in him and his goals for us as a nation.

True, there were those who believed the entire moon walk, even the flight itself, was a sophisticated studio simulation. In fact, I heard a skeptic recently debunking the idea that we had any sort of space technology at all by saying that artists, actors and clever politicians still were "coming to sell us a bill of goods" about an unreal and humanly impossible project.

Skeptics aside, for a brief time believers predominated. A commonly held opinion among them was the imminent advent of a new day for all human-kind, for the first time in part on the words engraved on the specially designed plaque Armstrong and Aldrin left on the moon which says, "We came in peace for all mankind." The hope, too, found foundation in Armstrong's first words from the lunar surface, "That's one small step for a man, one giant leap for mankind."

But strong and sustainable belief in the U.S. space program, fueled necessarily by heavy and frequent infusions of taxpayers' money, began to wane not long after the first lunar landing. The political disillusion of the '70s, capped by the Watergate cover-up, the marking-time non-motion of the various "rights" movements, the reality of leap-stair, pell-mell inflation and the fear of its inevitable companions, recession and depression, left little room to accommodate the needs of an evolving and expanding space program.

Although already approved drawing board activities continued, even these came under increasing public fire. The immeasurable learnings from the rest of the Apollo missions, including Skylab, from the unmanned Mars landings and the Venus, Jupiter and Saturn probes and fly-bys became lost in public outcry for tax reform and an end to public spending. Congressmen, activated by angry constituents, blue penciled funds for continuing space development which accounts in part for the extremely slow beginnings to the Shuttle Orbiter program. So many time and money delays made it impossible for Shuttle to straighten out Skylab as planned originally.

My feeling is that few understand the enormous human and money investment potential of space exploration and development as well as its vital necessity to man. Col. Frank Borman, commander on the Apollo 8 flight, the first to orbit the moon in December, 1968, said soon after his return to earth in a joint meeting of Congress, "Exploration really is the essence of the human spirit, and to pause, to falter, to turn our back on the quest for knowledge, is to perish." More recently, Walter Cronkite, in a review of the world's 20-plus years in space, quoted from the Book of Revelation, "Behold, I have set before you an open door, which no one is able to shut."

Because this "open door" quality of space mesmerizes, participants in "Remember the Future: The Apollo Legacy" will gather this weekend at the Airport Hilton for two days of conferences. Some 27 presenters are scheduled, including Tom Gates, director of the Foothill College planetarium and J. Peter Vajk, proponent of space settlements and author of "Domesticity Has Been Cancelled." Gates and Vajk participated in the successful Space Day at Mills High School last year. Representatives from NASA/Ames will bring the latest details about federally funded space activities. International questions will focus on "the politics of space" and "the earth project."

Men's sensations, experiences and skills will be dealt with by papers detailing the stresses astronauts encountered, space settler and shuttle passenger projected "profiles," space mapping and interstellar navigation and guidance problems.

A banquet Friday evening features "A Message From 2069." Poul Anderson, widely known Bay Area science fiction author, presents a retrospective view of starflight, and Dr. Robert Bussard, inventor of the interstellar ramjet, explains the propulsive concept that makes star flight possible.

Local conference participants aren't the only ones celebrating the 10th anniversary of the Apollo 11 moon landing. A noon rally under the heading "Space Day 'Three'" is scheduled for Friday in San Francisco. An all-day model rocket show will be Saturday in Sunnyvale. Thursday evening the Foothill planetarium presents "A Trip Between Two Planets," a multi-media synthesis of the sights, sounds and sensations experienced by the Apollo 11 astronauts.

Pulling our own weight

The first requisite of a good citizen in this republic of ours is that he shall be able and willing to pull his own weight.

Theodore Roosevelt, in 1943 the director of the United States Chamber of Commerce, Frederick G. Crawford, spoke to a group that had come to San Francisco for an important meeting. His words contained a definition of American ideals that invites review, as we mark the 20th anniversary of the United States.

Crawford acknowledged

that Americans are ready to give "their blood and guts" for three things: jobs, freedom and opportunity. But "What do we mean — jobs, freedom and opportunity?" he asked and then he answered his question: "Jobs, good working conditions for fair wages. Jobs selected of our own free will and which we are free to change. Freedom.

to live without fear that a dictator or his henchmen will control us."

"Freedom under laws and institutions which are fair, equitably administered and imposing only minimum restraints necessary for the protection of the rights of individuals and minorities. Such freedom is the birthright of our nation — a nation dedicated to tolerance, to the protection of the individual, to the grand old American principle of life and let live."

"Opportunity: to work and get ahead under our own steam, the chance to plan our own future, to raise our children so they grow and learn and live with that self-respect which is the right of free men."

Crawford continued, "These three together can provide for Americans the only security which comes where free citizens can look to the future with confidence."

Even as Crawford was speaking, Henry A. Wallace, who was the vice president of the U.S., was speaking of "a free man's duties." He said, "It is my belief that every freedom, every right, every privilege has its price, its corresponding duty without which it cannot be enjoyed."

Crawford and Wallace were inspired by the patriotism that accompanied World War II, yet it is not timely for Americans to examine themselves? Are jobs, freedom and opportunity still the basic desires of Americans? Are men and women of today filled with a sense of duty to work for their country and the goodness it bestows upon them? Do today's Americans know what Wallace meant when he said, "In this country the common man must learn to build his own industries with his own hands in a practical fashion?"

In a nation that has seen the rapid growth of welfare projects, do Americans still believe their country's future is secure? The common man learns to increase his productivity so that he and his children can eventually pay to the world community all that they have received?

On the anniversary of American independence, would it not be well to review the ideals of the Wallaces and Crawford and the hundreds of other leaders who marked the pathway for a successful America to follow? Americans will find the words of its sages in such volumes as "American Issues" by Thorp, Curti and Baker, "The American Spirit" by Thomas S. Bailey and "Documents of American History" edited by Henry Steele Commager.

These are grand old classics that are re-issued to guide the country. They may be found in every public library and should be used over and over.
